Reds Should Join

Help Poor Home Plea

TORONTO (CP)—British Prime Minister Douglas-Home called on the developed countries including Russia Tuesday night to get together to improve the lot of the poorer nations in the cause of peace.

There is no reason why Russia should not recognize a common duty to work to save the human race from extinction, he said in an address to Toronto's Empire Club at its 60th anniversary dinner. (See also Page 3.)

ONLY WAY

"The surest way—the only way—to serve humanity is to jettison the ideological conflict and organize the world for peace and plenty," he said.

"If the Soviet Union is willing to settle the differences in Europe and to turn to these more fruitful fields of enterprise, the smaller squabbles would be contained because the poor and discontented would see the prize before them of the fullness of life."

FLIES TO WASHINGTON

Sir Alec spoke here after a two-day visit to Ottawa during which he conferred with Prime Minister Pearson. He flies to Washington today for talks with President Johnson.

Sir Alec addressed his plea for co-operation particularly to the industrialized nations of the northern hemisphere, who could lead in solving the "problem of problems" of the disparity of wealth between the nations.

OWN ECONOMIES

Aid to the developing nations was important, but trade and investment were more so. The most important contribution for the developed countries would be to expand their own economies so as to provide increasing outlets for other countries' products.

International trade must be liberalized. "In this way also we can provide expanded export markets and facilitate the diversification of the economies of developing countries away from their present undue dependence on a limited range of primary products."

Liechtenstein Does Its Bit

VADUZ, Liechtenstein, (Reuters)—Liechtenstein, which has a population of 16,000, will form a peace corps to help underdeveloped countries, the parliament decided Tuesday.

The Western European principality covers only 62 square miles but its postage stamps, its false teeth factories and tax laws make it the world's most highly industrialized state.

Second Welfare Worker Quits

'SERVICE A FARCE'

Black Lashes Critics

'IT'S LOW POLITICS'

By TERRY HAMMOND
Colonist Legislative
Reporter

A B.C. social worker has quit his job charging government neglect of a northern B.C. area "where prostitution, drunkenness and promiscuity has driven juvenile delinquency to the danger point."

W. G. du Temple, a 23-year-old university graduate who works for the welfare department at Fort St. John, fired off his letter of resignation to Premier Bennett charging:

● A cashed almost double that considered desirable by the department.

● Responsibility for the needs of a population of 5,100 people scattered through five communities and along more 1,100 miles of road.

● Because of the impossible demands upon him the service he could render was a mere "farce."

● The welfare department's "in-training" course for social workers is useless.

● One of his communities had seven juveniles on probation but no probation officer.

● Without proper training he was forced to perform services beyond his knowledge or experience.

His letter was the second to be addressed to the premier by a government social worker in little more than a month.

The first was from Mrs. Bridget Moran of Prince George. She didn't quit, but she wrote to protest that the department was dangerously understaffed and its affairs not properly administered.

News of the Fort St. John social worker's letter reached Victoria just before Welfare Minister Black got up to launch his first defence of his department since the session opened just under three weeks ago.

NO REFERENCE
He made no reference to it other than to say he had an answer.

Mr. du Temple said he graduated in Arts from UBC last April and joined the welfare department to gain experience in the field before returning to university for a degree in social work.

He had expected to work in a junior capacity, but after a "perfectly useless" in-training course found himself saddled with the duties of a trained social worker.

On the day he reported for work at Fort St. John he had to counsel a severely disturbed

'We Can't Help Every Child'

Sevenson residential treatment centre in Victoria won't take children it can't help, said treatment director James Mair.

Mr. Mair was commenting on a charge from a resigning Fort St. John social worker, W. G. du Temple, that an emotionally disturbed youngster had been denied admission to Sevenson and the Children's Foundation after workers had tried to get him in for seven years.

Mr. Mair said he didn't know the case the worker referred to but it would be defeating the purpose of the service if children who could not be helped were admitted. He said there are a great many waiting and his department only select those it can help.

B.C.'s industrial boom is multiplying social welfare problems, Welfare Minister Black said yesterday.

In his first speech since the legislature opened nearly three weeks ago the embattled minister defended his department for nearly 90 minutes as opposition members remained surprisingly silent.

Welfare has been under fire since the first of the year when a part-time Prince George social worker, Mrs. Bridget Moran, wrote an impassioned plea to the premier for more staff and added facilities.

Mr. Black said yesterday it had been difficult for him to remain silent while charges were hurled at his department.

But during this period he had seen "politics in its lowest form being played with this vital public service."

His critics, he charged, had dealt in isolated cases and in generalities.

But anyone who cited single cases "is obviously trying to beat some emotional drum."

To say his department was an exceedingly difficult one to administer was "the understatement of the year."

In fact he could only do it by dint of working "24 hours a day, 365 days a year," like any other minister. (Opposition speakers have chided him as a two-days-a-week welfare minister since he held a TV audience that his other portfolios take three days a week.)

ONE HOLIDAY
He had had only one holiday in the past 11 years, he told the House to laughter from government as well as opposition benches.

He seemed momentarily nonplussed when the premier muttered audibly "perpetual holiday," but Mr. Bennett was smiling when he said it.

Peace Force

Canada Awaits Formula

FROM AP, UPI

The confusion which seems to be the outstanding aspect of Canada's participation in an international peace-keeping force for the island of Cyprus was compounded yesterday with contradictory opinions from British and Canadian authorities.

British sources said last night in New York that Canada, The Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and Norway have agreed to join with the United States and Britain in setting up a peace-keeping force. France, they said, had refused to take part.

Ottawa, on the other hand, said the Canadian government is withholding a final decision on the peace force until an acceptable formula is worked out for sending an international force there.

Canada, the Ottawa report said, was giving sympathetic consideration to the British request that this country contribute about 1,000 infantrymen to the contemplated force of about 10,000 men.

Meanwhile, in Cyprus, sharp new fighting broke out between Greek and Turkish Cypriots at the key southern port of Limassol. The British commanding general ordered British families from the nearby base confined to their homes.

U.S. Tests Canada's New Drone

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian-built CL-88 Drone, or pilotless, reconnaissance aircraft, will be flown for the first time shortly at the U.S. Army proving ground in Yuma, Ariz.

The Canadian Army said Tuesday a prototype of the remote-controlled Drone is being prepared for flight tests at Yuma. The Drone would gather intelligence over enemy territory where manned flight would be hazardous or impossible.

Sinatra Agreed to Abduction, Says Defence

'Disc Star' Financed Kidnapping

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Defence attorneys charged Tuesday Frank Sinatra, Jr., agreed to his own kidnapping—a plot they said was financed by a mystery man as an "advertising scheme" to win fame and money like his movie star father.

The "mystery man" was not named, but defence attorney George A. Ford said a "mysterious financier" was linked to the case. Ford made the charge in his opening statement to the jury of nine men, three women at the trial of three men accused of kidnapping young Sinatra Dec. 8 and releasing him unharmed a few days later for $240,000 ransom paid by his father.

The federal government called its first four witnesses Tuesday morning, mostly to supply background for charges relating to the kidnap conspiracy.

"We intend to show that certain people financed the alleged kidnapping, which I would call an advertising venture," Ford declared at the second day of the trial. He said the "kidnapping" was masterminded and financed by an unnamed singer who has "cut 2,000,000 records."

Another defence attorney, Gladys Towles Root, said the defence would show that a singer named Dean Torrence, member of the singing team of Jan and Dean, shared a safety deposit box with one defendant, Barry Worthington Keenan, 23, and that $1,670 of the ransom money was found in the box by federal agents.

Mrs. Root also said in her opening statement that the defence would show that "a contractual agreement was reached between Frank Sinatra Jr. and others in the alleged kidnapping."

Ford is a co-defender for Joseph Clyde Amaker, 23, while Mrs. Root represents defendant John William Irwin, 42.

Keenan's attorney, Charles Crouch, told the jury that the "kidnapping" was "a comedy of errors . . . like a movie script."

He said the crux of the case was for jurors "to decide whether a crime has been committed."

"We will show that Frank Jr. was involved in chicanery from start to finish," Crouch said.

"If Frankie (Sinatra Jr.) consented by even inference or implication to his abduction, then no crime was committed . . . and we can show that on more than one occasion he consented."

Hitler Plot Thwarted

NEW YORK (AP)—A nephew of Pope Paul VI says the Pope, while serving the Vatican as substitute secretary of state during the Second World War, saved Pope Pius XII from being kidnapped by Adolf Hitler.

Giovanni Battista Montini, the nephew, relates the incident in an article in Look magazine.

Telling how his uncle used his "magnetic gifts of persuasion," Montini writes:

"Hitler, increasingly angry at the Vatican's opposition to him decided to carry off the Pope (Pius XII) to an unspecified place in Germany, where he would be unable to effectively continue his pontificate.

"Informed of this scheme, my uncle immediately summoned Baron Ernst von Weizsacker, the German envoy to the Holy See.

"Only the two men knew exactly what was said during the tense and crucial confrontation, but Hitler abandoned his plan to abduct the pontiff.

"Magr. Antonio Travia, then my uncle's secretary, told me about this dramatic confrontation."

Witnesses Split Over Fair Trial

DALLAS (CP-AP)—Several defence witnesses testified Tuesday they doubt Dallas would give a fair trial to Jack Ruby, 32-year-old night club owner charged with murdering

Lee Oswald, accused assassin of President Kennedy.

BUT A Methodist minister, Rev. William A. Helms, said Ruby could get a just trial here.

The pastor is the man who, the day Oswald was killed, preached in his church and repeated later on television that some Dallas school children cheered when told Kennedy had been shot.

They were witnesses summoned by the defence in an effort to prove Dallas is so anxious to burnish its image as an upright city that it would be impossible to find 12 men in this Texas community of more than 1,000,000 who would try Ruby impartially.

The trial is scheduled to begin Monday — unless District Judge Joe Brown grants the defence motion to move it to another city.

Stanley Marcus, president of Neiman - Marcus department store, testified first for the defence Tuesday.

"I have grave reservations whether the defence or the prosecution can get a fair trial in Dallas," he said.

Earle Cabell, mayor at the time of the shooting but now a candidate for the U.S. Congress, confirmed he had said publicly that:

"Ruby brought down shame on the people of Dallas;" there is "a lot of animosity directed toward Ruby" in Dallas; "civic resentment" against Ruby might be a factor in his trial.

And Clayton Fowler, president of the Dallas County Criminal Bar Association, said "it would be most difficult" to give Ruby a fair trial "while the nation is trying Dallas."

New York lawyer Mark Lane, hired by Mrs. Margaret Oswald in December to defend her son Lee before the commission investigating the Kennedy assassination, was barred from hearing yesterday by Chief Justice Earl Warren because "Lee Oswald is not being prosecuted here."

No Decision Yet On Birch Article

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI)—A University of Illinois spokesman said Tuesday school officials want to read Prof. Basilio Oliver's article in a John Birch Society publication before making any decisions about either the article or its author.

Reville's article attacked President Kennedy and said he was assassinated because he was falling behind in a Communist scheme for the takeover of the U.S.

Charles Flynn, assistant to university president Dr. David Henry, said, "we assume Professor Oliver has written his views as a private citizen."

"However, if it becomes obvious he has misused his position, the matter would be referred to the proper academic officials."

Oliver, 54, a professor of classics, is considered an outstanding scholar in his field.

He said he has been a member of the national council of the John Birch Society since the society was formed.

The article said Kennedy did much for the Communist conspiracy "but was rapidly becoming a liability" because the Reds had set 1963 as the year for the "effective capture of the U.S." and Kennedy had fallen behind.

Oliver said the assassination frustrated the takeover.

His alternative explanations were that the Reds executed Kennedy because he planned to "turn American," they did it to avoid scandal or Fidel Castro arranged it as a result of a Red rift.

War Death of Children Spectre JFK Feared

WASHINGTON (AP)—The death of children in a nuclear war was the spectre which haunted John Kennedy during the 1962 Cuban crisis, says brother Robert Kennedy.

In a foreword to a new edition of the former president's book, Profiles in Courage, written by the attorney-general and completed 26 days after the president was assassinated, Kennedy says:

"The one matter which really was of concern to him and truly had meaning and made that time much more fearful than it would otherwise have been, was the spectre of death of the children of this country and around the world—the young people who had no part and knew nothing of the confrontation, but whose lives would be snuffed out like everyone else's."

The attorney-general says his brother realized the possibility that he could be killed but dismissed it as being "unimportant, almost frivolous."

Water Woe Over

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. navy department says it will install at the U.S. naval base of Guantanamo a giant conversion plant that will end Cuba's ability to harass the base by cutting its water supply.

The department also announced an unspecified number of Cuban civilian workers at the base are being fired in line with President Johnson's order to reduce the $6,000,000 annual flow of wages that reaches the Cuban economy through the workers.

Zanzibar Wants To Stay

LONDON (AP)—Zanzibar's revolutionary regime has told Britain it wants to stay in the Commonwealth and British officials said Tuesday they have not replied yet.

Britain has refused to recognize the leftist regime of President Abeid Karume, contending it is not clear whether his government has effective control of the Indian Ocean island.

Scientists Leaving Brain Drain Hits U.K.

LONDON (UPI)—Labor Party leader Harold Wilson Tuesday night launched a major attack on the government for alleged failure to take proper steps to halt the drain of top British scientists to the U.S.

"In these ruthlessly competitive days and the new industrial revolution, Britain cannot afford to be left behind," Wilson said.

Political sources here said Prime Minister Home may raise the "brain drain" issue during his talks with President Johnson today and Thursday in Washington.

Dr. John Anthony Pople, 38, superintendent of the basic physics division of the National Physics Laboratory said Tuesday he will leave soon to join the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh.

Informants said the government never has contemplated a ban on scientists taking posts abroad. An alternative of offering the scientists salaries as large as they can earn in the U.S. was called unrealistic under present economic conditions.

Dr. Leonard Weiss, 35, cancer research pathologist at Cambridge University, will head a new unit for the New York State health department in Buffalo.

Prof. Ian Bush, 35, physiology department head at Birmingham University, has accepted a research appointment at the Worcester foundation in Massachusetts in October.

Vote Snub For Nehru

NEW DELHI (AP)—Ailing Prime Minister Nehru's ruling Congress party has suffered a prestige defeat in a byelection in Rajasthan state.

Right-wing Swatantra party candidate Mandhata Singh defeated Congress candidate Shiv Sharan Singh 20,771 to 18,200 in the election for a seat in the state legislature.

Congress party officials said the defeat jeopardizes the party's chances in three other byelections this year and the next general election.

Call Girl Ring Witness Killed

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP)—A former bartender who was among the busiessmen questioned about a suburban-style call girl operation employing housewives and mothers was found dead in his flaming car Tuesday.

Detectives identified the victim as Edmund (Teddy) Nugent, 48, of Plainville, once a bartender at the Copacabana night club in New York and more recently a part owner of the Jericho lounge here.

Police declined to say whether they thought the death an accident, suicide or foul play. An autopsy was ordered.

The car was parked near the Jericho Lounge, Nugent had worked at the lounge Monday night.

Officers said Nugent was among the 200 men being questioned about the vice ring recently uncovered on Long Island.

Retaining the Heritage

THE MOVE to "save the charm" of the Victoria area by the preservation of historic sites and buildings before it is too late, has taken a positive step forward. A private trust has been mooted as the most likely effective method of securing this very desirable aim.

As the provincial archivist noted, ten years from now these buildings of architectural and historic significance may in large part have disappeared. Speedy action is necessary if the pioneer heritage of the city and its environs is to be protected.

The core of the problem is money with which to secure and maintain such buildings as are still worth preserving. It is here that private benevolence, coupled with wise municipal zoning, may be invoked.

An example is to be found in the national trusts of England and Scotland, where by voluntary operation similar historic sites and buildings are preserved. These trusts invite the co-operation of individuals and groups by scheduled memberships of varying fees, and philanthropic bequest and endowment by individuals of means interested in this work.

Such an operation here would be on a much smaller scale but there is every reason to believe it could be equally successful. It certainly seems to be a method likely to gain considerable response, and the project is well worth pursuing with enthusiasm.

As an opening gambit the committee appointed to draft specific plans along the lines of a private trust might be well advised to enumerate and list publicly the buildings falling into the category of those of historical interest. This would sharpen the focus of such a trust's aims and provide a definite objective to which all those concerned about the preservation of the civic heritage might set their sights.

Backward Step

THE CONCERN expressed by the Ontario Professional Foresters Association in asking Prime Minister Pearson for assurance that forestry is not being downgraded in the realm of national affairs must be echoed in British Columbia especially, this province accounting for so much of Canada's wood-products wealth.

The impression certainly is given that the federal forestry department will be consigned to lower status through Mr. Pearson's cabinet reorganization, which will make it merely a part of a ministry, in conjunction with rural development, and this portfolio in secondary position to that of agriculture.

The real criterion of course will be whether in the new position the department will be able to compete as successfully for its share of public funds for the work that needs doing, or whether the interests of agriculture in the sense of farming will usually prevail.

This remains to be seen, and meantime the prime minister can easily offer assurance that the department will be regarded and treated as no less important for the structural change and the alteration of name.

But forest products being such a vital part of Canada's export trade, and the woods being a renewable resource in need of such careful husbanding in both the federal and provincial spheres, the seeming relegation of forestry to lowest rank at Ottawa by the Liberal administration is cause for some apprehension.

Time will tell, but certainly the appearance is that the Pearson government is taking a backward step in this important sector of the country's economy.

Taipei Decision

THE WESTERN WORLD has long looked upon the Chinese people as being the outstanding practitioners of patience and stoicism. Through China's long history its warlords have always won their greatest victories through wars of attrition.

However, perhaps through their enforced separation from the Chinese mainland, Chinese Nationalist government leaders appear to have lost their characteristic quality.

Rather than employ their age-old and time-tested strategy of wearing down their opponents—in this instance, the Republic of France—the Formosan Chinese have moved quickly rather than wisely to break off diplomatic relationship with President de Gaulle's government in protest against his recognition of Communist China.

Rather than placing the onus of deciding between the Peking and Taipei regimes upon France alone, the Formosan government has rejected the advice of its American mentors and played directly into the hands of General de Gaulle and the Chinese Communists.

No longer is the French president faced with making a distasteful and diplomatically dangerous decision on the matter.

Taipei has made it for him.

It's 'Phony' But . . .

IF ONE WERE to judge by the utterances of the NDP leader, Mr. T. C. Douglas, his party should be ready and willing to turn out the Pearson regime at the drop of a hat.

In Calgary last week for instance he told party adherents that the "de-gutting" of the Liberal pension plan, as he so termed it, was a sellout to insurance company lobbies and an instance of "just how phony Liberal progressive-ism can be."

If logic were the parliamentary criterion it might be assumed from this that the NDP party could no longer support the Pearson minority government, and that a regime it finds to be "phony" should be voted out of office.

Logic and confidence votes in Parliament are two different things, however. The NDP party has already swallowed the violation of its cardinal creed that there should be no nuclear arms in Canada and done its part to keep the Liberals in power.

The reason for this is not far to seek among all groups except the Conservative opposition; it has been widely acknowledged in Ottawa. MPs do not want to risk another election and the possible loss of their $18,000-a-year seats.

Mr. Pearson has not been conspicuously successful as a prime minister but he has one very shrewd move to party credit. The near-doubling of parliamentary pay has ensured that he is kept in office, minority government or not.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and scaling walls . . ."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE other day I said the Beatles hairdos weren't so bad, judging only by this quartette's photographs.

I take it all back, having seen the real thing on Sunday's Sullivan show.

They put a real, honest-to-goodness floor mop to shame. I thought immediately of the wig Johnny Shayne wears sometimes in his comic skits. He must be wishing now he were four persons instead of one.

Quantity, that's the secret of this Liverpoolian phenomenon.

Actually I was out visiting but our host turned in for a few minutes to let his guests see these modern wonders of the world. A few minutes was enough. But we had a good laugh.

A member of our staff told me she thought they were cute, and so they are. In a different sense, however. They've had the wit to invent and exploit a new gimmick, heads shaggy enough to make an English sheep dog creep away to a dark corner.

Make no mistake, this is the core of the obsession that makes teenagers swoon with an adulation they can't explain. They just "feel" it, they'll tell you. Strip the Beatles of their wild looks and they'd be hard put to win an amateur-hour audition.

They can't sing, they can't play the guitar, not so far as I could guess above the juvenile screams, but they jump and yell and make an awful lot of noise. This is how to put "pop" over and be entertainment VIPs, only . . .

The African tribesmen with their tom-toms and wriggly dances do it much better.

Yet these "innocents" from abroad know the kind of stuff that coins the shekels. They must be judged in the context of their milieu. And that milieu is an extant entertainment malaise that encompasses the grotesque, the "belting" of songs without rhyme or reason, the sheer volume of raucous noise.

There are times when I think this one of the biggest fakes ever to invade the realm of musical sound.

It would depress you if it weren't that it will pass, given enough staying power to await such a joyous moment.

But the Beatles boys write their own tunes, and there are other assessments. The Toronto Star says the Royal family "goes" for them and that serious musicologists hail them as the progenitors of England's first indigenous pop music.

My ears must have betrayed me; in this respect they didn't sound much different from other current noise-makers.

It is reported also that the music critic of the Times, London, no less, "rhapsodized over their 'pandiatonic clusters,' their 'flat submediant key switches' and their 'Aeolian cadences.'"

Maybe I too was mesmerized, but with their hairy mop instead of their pandiatonics. And for good reason there is the verdict of a 14-year-old miss who said after she saw them first: "I knew right away they were simply great."

Who are older folk to question this voice of authority, the juvenility that has to embrace measles and other afflictions as part of growing up.

But the Beatles, or their ten per cent managers, must be mighty glad Britain ended its compulsory military service a year ago.

That would have shrunk the Beatles' hairdos before they grew, and look at the loss this would have been to Ed Sullivan and his hepnot audiences.

From the Scriptures
Jesus said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on Him that sent me. — St. John, 12:44.

"First the big corporations wanted specialists, now they want specialists with a liberal-arts education. They're looking for scholars, not executive material!"

Advantage for Khrushchev

China's Succession Problem

By ERNEST CONINE from Vienna

THE word from Moscow is that Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev is tired of turning the other cheek to hecklers in Peking and is preparing to take the offensive.

There are signs that this time the Kremlin may swing directly at Mao Tse-tung, the aging Chinese leader, by trying to cultivate jealousies and suspicions within the upper echelons of the Chinese Communist Party.

The first gun already has been fired with publication in a Moscow-controlled organ of an article singling out for praise Liu Shao-chi, who is widely regarded as the man hand-picked by Mao to succeed him.

Since Liu and Mao are close comrades of long standing, such attempts to play off one against the other almost certainly are doomed to failure.

But the article which appeared in the Prague-based "Problems of Peace and Socialism," is nevertheless significant. It underscores how the Moscow-Peking rift has become a personal contest between Mao and Khrushchev, as well as a clash of ideologies and national interests. The infighting may become more and more dirty.

And, the article points out the fact that China, even more than the Soviet Union, has a succession problem.

Mao appears healthy and vigorous. At 70, he is three years younger than Charles de Gaulle, and only a year older than Khrushchev. But he is mortal and questions arise. Who will step into Mao's shoes when he eventually leaves the scene—and what will be the impact on Peking's relations with the world?

Red China's stepped up activity in Africa, its involvement in the leftwing policies of Western Europe, and now French recognition of the Peking regime make the answers to these questions of more than passing interest.

Europe's China-watchers are dusting off their files and taking a new look at the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party. What they find is an aging but closely knit clique which has admitted no new blood to its ranks since 1958—and shows no intention of doing so now.

In line with the pyramidal power structure which prevails in Communist countries, China is ruled by a 20-man politburo—or more precisely by seven men who constitute the politburo's "standing committee." Sitting at the apex of the pyramid is party chairman Mao.

The men around Mao are a hard core of old comrades. Many date back to the painful "Long March" of 1934, when Mao and a Communist column fought their way 6,000 miles to North China, from which the successful drive against the Kuomintang was launched more than a decade later.

Western experts assume that a new leader would be chosen from the ranks of the standing committee. And as one Sinologist puts it, the best approach is "to weed out those who are least likely to come under consideration."

Two members of the standing committee can be eliminated immediately. They are Marshal Lin Biao, who has suffered from a recurring serious illness for two years, and Chen Yun, a protagonist of caution who apparently fell from grace when the militant "Great Leap Forward" was decided upon in 1957 and 1958.

Among the remaining four members, Marshal Chu Teh would be a natural choice—but at 77 he is presumably too old.

Premier Chou En-lai, as one of the founders of the party might have a valid claim to the job. But he is 65, and his trouble with dizzy spells and nosebleeds during his recent Africa tour pointed to dubious health.

Liu Shao-chi, chairman of the republic, is said to be Mao's own choice—and as such, must stack up as the most likely successor if Mao dies or leaves his post anytime soon.

But Liu, too, is 65, and therefore unlikely to be more than an interim ruler in any event.

All these factors throw the spotlight on the man who is theoretically the lowest ranking on the standing committee—Teng Hsiao-ping.

At 59, Teng is the youngest active member of the standing committee, and it is his youth which feeds speculation that he is the man to watch in the Peking sweepstakes.

Teng headed the Chinese delegation to the abortive negotiations with the Soviets last June. In addition he is top man on the party secretariat, and he filled in as acting premier during Chou's trip to Africa.

There is no reason to believe, experts note, that either Teng or Liu would soften Red China's militant posture toward the Soviet Union or the West.

All this would indicate that Khrushchev has precious little chance of driving a wedge into the topmost ranks of the Peking leadership.

But there is strong evidence that Mao himself is almost pathologically leery of sharing power with younger—and perhaps more flexible—elements in the party.

Politburo vacancies created by the deaths of two party stalwarts remain unfilled. So far as known, no alternate members of the politburo have moved up to full membership. The politburo theoretically derives its authority from the party central committee and party congresses.

But, despite a constitutional provision that a party congress must be held each year, no such meeting has in fact been held since 1958 and none is in prospect.

When no party congress is in session, the constitution provides that the central committee shall run the party—and that it shall meet twice a year. Yet central committee plenums have been held only twice since 1959.

The veil of secrecy surrounding developments in Peking make it impossible to judge what foreign policy shifts a change in leaders might bring.

But prolongation of the present situation is likely to impair the future quality of party leadership in Peking. And it may well create frustrations which Khrushchev and company will be only too glad to exploit.

Today In History

By The Canadian Press

Gold was discovered in New South Wales, Australia, 113 years ago today—in 1851. Discoveries began near Clunes, at Anderson's Creek, near Buninyong and in amazing richness at Ballarat and Bendigo. The rush was on, and land prices and wages soared. In 1859, the population of New South Wales and Victoria was 265,503, but by 1860 it had jumped to 386,383. The gold boom began to decline after 1857 and many miners turned to farming.

1856—Twenty-two persons drowned when a Nile River ferryboat capsized near Mansama, Egypt.

1960—Fighting erupted between Israeli and United Arab Republic forces near Ashmura in Israel.

Saving Historical Buildings

THE mayor is to be congratulated on taking the initiative in bringing together people interested in the preservation of historic buildings. It is high time such a body existed, to prevent a repetition of the recent destruction of the Tolmie house.

Even the smaller communities in the east are beginning to realize the value of their historic buildings and artifacts; southern Ontario is dotted with little pioneer museums, and of course the wonderful Upper Canada Village has drawn visitors from all over the continent.

It is to be hoped that a historic buildings society will include representatives from Greater Victoria; it would be a pity to have no influence in Oak Bay or Saanich.

Smoking

It is clear that more smokers die of lung cancer than non-smokers. It is far from clear why this is so, or how much other factors such as race, geography and occupation are responsible. Many of the statistical surveys so blandly sweep conflicting evidence under the rug that they sound more evangelical than scientific. With this type of approach one might argue that if 99.9 per cent of heavy smokers do not get lung cancer then the obvious way to avoid it is to smoke heavily.

The federal government grandly announces that it is allocating 60 million dollars to stamp out the weed. The government could save many times the number of lives by using the money to enforce existing traffic regulations.

Costa Rica

Under a Threat

By JOHN CROCKER

BEFORE reducing height to approach the airport, the captain of the aircraft announced over the intercom: "On the right of the aircraft you can see Mount Irazu, the 10,000-foot volcano which has been active now for almost a year. She's pretty active today."

A huge, thick, angry cloud was being belched forth from a large crater and carried by the prevailing wind in the same direction as that in which we were flying—towards San Jose, about 15 miles away.

I was to learn later that it could have a calamitous effect on this small republic of about a million and a quarter population, which has been successfully trying for the past 70 odd years to set an example in democratic government which might well be emulated by its neighbors.

I learned also that expert volcanologists who had come from abroad since March, 1963, when Irazu first began misbehaving, could give no assurance that the volcano would not at any moment become even more violent and destroy the whole city of San Jose. At the moment Irazu confines herself to covering the city and the land for hundreds of miles, around on the central plateau of Costa Rica with a fine, dark-grey volcanic ash.

So far, I was told, the volcanic dust has done no major harm, although all vegetation and roofs have an unreal grey appearance, and if the streets in the town were not regularly swept, they would soon be covered by the dust.

But the danger is that this year's coffee harvest, the mainstay of the Costa Rican economy, will be ruined if the dust-fall is particularly heavy towards the end of May when the plants begin to flower.

Nevertheless, San Jose (altitude 4,200 feet) is a cheerful city, without the dust, it seemed that it could be a climatic paradise, with temperatures in the 60s and 70s for the greater part of the year. It is also, I was assured on all aides, the capital city with the most efficient and truly democratic government in this hemisphere.

This is because all Costa Ricans, the vast majority of whom are of direct European Spanish stock, with only a few thousand West Indian Negroes and still fewer Amerindians, take a personal interest in the process of government.

When Costa Rica became independent from Spain in 1812 there was a series of dictatorships, but since about 1890 the country has had a stable system of democratic government interrupted by only two short-lived totalitarian revolutions, in 1919 and 1948. No other Latin American country can claim such a record.

"A Castro revolution is not possible in Costa Rica," I was told by the editor of one of the four daily newspapers in San Jose. "We're not Communists."

"Oh, yes," he said, "we have our dedicated Communists. We know them all. The party is banned, but they masquerade under other names. They tried to stage a demonstration in sympathy with Panama and against the United States the other day, but it was a complete flop and everybody dispersed when the police told them to behave sensibly."

A former cabinet minister told me: "We have no army, no navy and no air force and our police are unarmed. Theoretically anyone could invade us, but if war ever broke out here, it would be part of a world issue and there would not be much from a military point of view that we, or any other of the Central American republics, could do about it."

What does worry many Costa Ricans, however, apart from the ever-present volcanic dust, is the soaring rate of population growth, one of the highest in the world. It is a matter of facing up to the fact that jobs have to be created for a population which, if the present trend continues, will double itself roughly every 20 years.

In recent years there has been a slump in the price of coffee on the New York market and it is only now beginning to pick up again. The result is that there just is not enough money coming into the Costa Rican treasury to expand the country's economy and so provide the necessary new jobs.

There is, of course, the Alliance for Progress project, but this, according to San Jose business circles, concentrates primarily on improving roads, sanitation and health.

But easily the most hopeful project so far undertaken to improve the economies of the small Central American republics is that started about two years ago jointly by the republics of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica (with Panama as a sort of observer on the sidelines) to set up a Central American Common Market, based, largely, on the European prototype.

This, I was told by both political and business circles, is progressing rapidly under the guidance of a group of enthusiastic and hard-working leaders from all five republics. There is already a Central American Bank for Economic Integration (in Tegucigalpa) and an active secretariat (in Guatemala), and tariff barriers are being progressively broken down.

Broadly, the idea is to set up factories in the various areas which can sell their goods to a market of some 12 million people rather than to the much smaller five national markets. Cattle and agricultural production in general will be included as the plan progresses through various stages, and the optimists say that economies in this part of the world will have been revolutionized in five years.

Costa Ricans, however, say that, though political integration is very much on the agenda as a corollary to economic integration, they are a bit doubtful about associating their country too closely with their somewhat dictatorial and feudalistic neighbors.

In the meantime economics and politics apart the great desire here is that Irazu should stop belching forth its dust; and, though the subject is hardly ever mentioned, there is a very real fear that one day—any day—something more than this may erupt from the crater and put an end to San Jose as it is known today.

has been mentioned more than once in the past 4,000 years that alcohol is a poison, but our government continues to build its vote-getting highways with profits from its monopoly on the sale of alcohol.

Many, many times the mortality from lung cancer comes from people eating too much and getting fat. Yet so far one is not aware of any witch-hunt against food.

Now it is proposed in authoritative circles to have cigarette packages carry the warning that the contents are dangerous. Fair enough; provided that we put the skull and crossbones on whisky bottles, require that the front bumpers of motor cars be made in the shape of a scythe, and have every box of chocolates labelled "This contains your diabetes." Or alternatively, we might just relax.

Houseflies

It is a disgrace that a woman in Saanich, a lone woman at that, has had to tramp the community to get signatures for a petition for weekly garbage collections.

The opponents may not know the facts about the filthiest contaminator of foods, the housefly.

It takes only eight to 10 days for a fly to reach full maturity after the egg is laid and hatched. Each fly lays a cluster of eggs at a time, and in one season can lay 800 to 1,000 eggs.

Their strong sense of smell leads them to the foulest decaying matters upon which they crawl and feed, then only to fly into a home and light upon food, dishes, towels and faces of babies.

Meat and fish scraps in household garbage, if left over a week, are a perfect breeding ground.

Facts like these should be printed in big letters and circularized to every householder and posted in every public building. Weekly garbage collections should be compulsory and not optional.

Ruinous Spiral

Incessant labor union strike problems! The public continues to wail about the rising costs of living and inflationary trend, but fail to realize the contributing factors (higher wages) and have failed to "demand" (labor unions' favorite word) a national halt to this ruinous wage and price spiral of greed.

The recent $8,000 "grab" by parliamentarians and the 100 per cent salary increase to $40,000 for the CBC president are deplorable examples, but labor unions' and civil servants' incessant demands are becoming intolerable. Timid employers continue to yield.

We need a democratic "right to work" act or drastic wage and price (and profit!) controls; otherwise an economic explosion in Canada is inevitable!

Canadian Red Calls For Two Nations To End Separatism

A new federal pact which would link Quebec as one nation with the rest of Canada as another is visualized as possibly the best solution to the problems arising from the Quebec separatist movement, Canadian Communist Party leader Leslie Morris said yesterday.

The Daily Colonist that unless the constitution were re-written to allow for such a pact, he felt that Quebec would secede.

Communism is a maturing movement, leading a resurgence to the left after years of political passivity.

He admitted that this resurgence could be cut across by a move to the ultra-right by some people.

This maturing, he said, indicates that "politics is getting polarized" with people moving to the right and left rather than staying somewhere in the political middle.

Injunction Bars Picketing

An injunction against picketers at the Oakcrest Food Market was granted in Victoria courthouse Monday.

Cockfighting Used to Be Thing

Did You Dine on Pancakes?

By DON GAIN

Yesterday was Fat Tuesday—Mardi Gras as we say when we're speaking French, which isn't very often; in fact, practically jamais.

A matter of fact, Not to mention New Orleans and a few other places.

It was also Shrove Tuesday or Pancake Tuesday.

In England Pancake Day used to be the great Derby Day of cockfighting.

"Or martyr beat, like Shrove-tide cocks, with bats," wrote Peter Pindar in Subjects for Painters.

But back to France. In Paris a fat ox used to be paraded through the streets, crowned with a fillet and accompanied by mock priests and a band of tin-instruments in imitation of a Roman sacrificial procession.

All in preparation for today which is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent.

Here in Victoria we haven't seen any cockfighting, or any sacrificial oxen for that matter.

In fact you never even see a pancake any more on Pancake Tuesday.

Well, hardly ever.

Sellers Picks Bride

NEW YORK (AP) — British actor Peter Sellers, 36, will marry Swedish actress Britt Ekland, 25, whom he met only 11 days ago. He phoned her here Monday from London, proposed—and she accepted.

Sellers' 11-year first marriage ended last March when he divorced his wife on grounds of adultery. Co-respondent was the architect who designed the couple's apartment.

Sellers has two children.

Surrender or Reject Film

By IAN STREET

Alain Resnais, director of the film, Last Year at Marienbad, now at the Fox Cinema, has described it as an exercise in persuasion.

A man and a woman meet in a great baroque hotel. The film doesn't purport to show a lived experience. There is a dreamlike quality to their relationship carried on in the endless hallways and ornate salons.

Everything in the film may have happened before, at the moment, or never.

A British critic has said: "We can make what we want of it. Either we surrender to the hypnotic pull of Resnais' imagery or reject it."

What are the characters doing when they're not in that fantastic hotel, peopled by elegantly-attired guests, that are no more alive than the statuary in the formal garden?

Avant-garde novelist Alain Robbe-Grillet, who wrote the script, has been quoted as saying "they have no other existence than the one we have given them."

Mr. Resnais succeeded in persuading me the film was worth seeing. Don't ask me what happened, though.

Children Find Target From Jet Tow Plane

Students of Deep Cove Elementary School found an eight-foot navy target which had fallen from a T-33 jet into a field near their school yesterday afternoon.

The 16-pound target, of styrofoam and cardboard, was being towed by a jet piloted by Lieut. Sidney Fairbairn.

Lieut. Fairbairn was returning to VU-33 Squadron's base at Patricia Bay when the target broke loose.

B.C. to Be Asked To Broaden Survey

Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee will ask the provincial government to include unorganized territories of North Saanich, View Royal, Colwood, Langford and Metcheson in a proposed study of area sewer needs for the next 50 years.

COVE PENINSULA

This means that if the government agrees to bring in the unorganized territories in the immediate surrounding area the study will cover the entire Saanich Peninsula and the built-up sections to the west.

Reeve Lee said it remains "questionable" at this time whether the provincial government would agree to participate in the study to extent desired. He said it would be a "grave mistake," however, to overlook this opportunity of making a comprehensive survey of sewer needs.

LACK OF INTEREST

Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay said the lack of interest on the government's part is at the departmental level and suggested that representatives of the intermunicipal committee and the metro health board talk the matter over with Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black and Health Minister Eric Martin.

Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White, representing the technical committee which originally recommended the survey, said consulting engineers would design new sewer outfalls and lay out trunk sewers for the entire area.

The strike is continuing at B.C.'s three major shipyards with no end in sight and no meetings scheduled between labor and management or with provincial deputy labor minister William Sands.

Rejected by union members at a Monday meeting in Vancouver was Mr. Sands' proposal for a three-year contract.

Representatives of the three shipyards, who also attended the meeting, turned down the proposal last week.

FRINGE BENEFITS

The proposal called for a three-year contract with a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for journeymen each year and a further two cents an hour in fringe benefit increases, with the exception of boiler-makers and machinists who were offered five cents the first year, 10 cents the next two years and two cents in fringe benefit increases.

The proposal called for a number of other adjustments in contract provisions.

Approximately 1,400 workers at Victoria Machinery Depot and Yarrow's Ltd. Victoria, and about 650 at Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd., North Vancouver, are still on strike.

Union members are picketing VMD on Bay Street and Dallas Road, Yarrow's on Esquimalt Road and at their Nanaimo warehouse, and the Government Graving Dock in Esquimalt.

EXPECTED BACK

The Bahamas-based freighter Maratha Endeavour is expected back at the drydock towards the end of the month to reload her lumber cargo, discharged last month before repairs in Seattle.

Asked if longshoremen would load the Maratha Endeavour if the drydock is still being picketed, Stanley Ball, their president and business agent, said: "There will be no problem. We would work it out with the other unions. We feel that we would be able to load the ship."

But No Eviction, Says Nimsick

Pearkes' Home Museum?

Cranbrook MLA Leo Nimsick doesn't want to do Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes out of a home, but he said in the legislature yesterday that Government House should be used to house the new provincial museum.

"With all respects to the lieutenant-governor, we've got many provinces in Canada which have no government house."

Original cost of the impressive building was high, and while it is difficult to figure from government expenditure estimates how much it costs to operate Government House, it probably is costly, said Mr. Nimsick.

He suggested it would be put to better use of the public if it were used for the much-talked-about museum. "Is this NDP policy?"

asked a government member.

"No, it is my own idea," Mr. Nimsick replied.

The NDP member also suggested passengers should have "free passage" on B.C. government ferries, but he did not explain exactly what he had in mind.

B.C. Help for Peninsula

By IAN STREET

Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee yesterday decided to seek government assistance in launching a multi-million-dollar "buy now, pay later" scheme for acquisition of parkland on the Saanich Peninsula.

The committee endorsed the principle, put forward by Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay, that the provincial government be asked to advance the money needed to buy the parklands now. He said agreement could be reached later on the basis for repaying the money.

FORGET DETAILS
"We must forget about details now," said Mr. Cox. "We must try to solve the problems of saving potential parklands on our outskirts in a broad general way. Two principal factors are money and urgency."

The reeve termed "too modest" the recent suggestion by Hugh Stephen in his report to the chamber of commerce that local councils be asked to set aside half a mill each year for purchase of parklands outside their borders.

PARK SITES

"If everyone agreed we'd probably have only enough money to acquire a couple of park sites before the rest are gone," Mr. Cox said.

He said that when a list of park properties for acquisition is drawn up the city-owned Elk-Beaver Lake property should be included. "What has to be done must be done as a broad plan," Mr. Cox added.

IN PRINCIPLE

The reeve urged an immediate approach to the government requesting approval in principle of the plan.

"We can thrash out the details later," he said. "If we tried to do that at this stage we could bog down forever."

The greatest need now is for sufficient cash to purchase the more desirable park sites, Mr. Cox said. "At the moment we don't know if we are talking about $2,000,000 or $5,000,000. But at least we're not going to the government with our hands out asking for an outright gift," he added.

BOUNDED OUT

The reeve said the province should be "sounded out" on the scheme before local councils are asked to commit themselves. He added: "At this stage we need only a general agreement from the government that this is worthwhile."

Mayor R. B. Wilson suggested that he and the reeves of Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, together with Ald. M. H. Mooney, chairman of the Capital Region Planning Board, form a delegation to lay the proposal before the government. Meanwhile, assessors of the four municipalities will be asked to place a value on the properties to be acquired.

There was general agreement expressed at yesterday's meeting some form of joint park board would have to be created to administer parkland under the scheme.

Liquor Stolen

TOFINO—Twelve bottles of liquor and $37 in change were stolen by thieves who broke into the Royal Canadian Legion branch here during the weekend. The club-room door was forced, but the safe was untouched. RCMP are investigating.

Sort Out Problems

Too Many Traffic Cases In Family Court—Cox

Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay said the caseload of Greater Victoria family and juvenile court would be greatly reduced by removal of traffic cases from its jurisdiction.

Mr. Cox said there is "good reason" to continue operating a joint family and juvenile court, but added: "I'm unalterably opposed to either building a new court or acquiring property until some serious problems are sorted out."

The reeve said the idea of removing all traffic cases from juvenile court was not a new one.

If it was put into practice here, Mr. Cox said, it would probably require a deputy magistrate to sit in a night traffic court for Greater Victoria. But he indicated this was preferable to the present system.

Removal of traffic cases from juvenile court and other problems will be discussed with the attorney-general's department.

By BOB PETHICK

Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Law, 60, will retire in June after 24 years service with the department.

In the search to replace the veteran fire fighter Saanich council has placed advertisements in papers as far east as Winnipeg. But chairman of the Saanich finance committee Joseph Casey said last night it was also possible the position could be filled from within the department.

The position is advertised in all the fire halls," he said. Chief Law first joined the Saanich fire department in 1940 as chief after serving 14 years on the city fire department.

In those days, he says, the department had two pieces of equipment, a converted Cadillac and a GMC truck and six men.

Since the chief took over and with the co-operation of council the department has grown to five modern fire trucks, three fire halls — at Elk Lake, Shelbourne, and a new headquarters at Vernon Avenue, and an emergency ambulance service with a modern ambulance capable of carrying four stretcher cases.

There are 44 members now on staff. "Improved water services with lots more hydrants have made the job of fire fighting easier in the area," said Chief Law. He also pointed out at one time the department was responsible for fighting fire on 52 square miles in Saanich. Since the formation of Central Saanich municipality the area has been cut to 30, still a tidy chunk of real estate to be looked after.

The chief believes existing equipment will be adequate to look after needs of the municipality for some years.

"But if building continues as it has been going in the municipality we will need to take on more men," says the chief.

His pride and joy is the gleaming array of modern recording equipment in the alarm room at Saanich headquarters.

"This is the most modern equipment in Canada, only duplicated in Winnipeg as far as I know. With this there is no dispute with the public. Every word spoken is put on tape and the tapes are kept for 12 months," says the chief.

The chief is looking forward to his retirement, though, and after two six-month extensions on his service is planning a long trip through the United States and some cruising.

"Our two children are grown up and married and we can have anytime we choose," he says.

Oriole Flying

HMCS Oriole, the navy's only commissioned sailing vessel, breezed into San Francisco Bay last Friday a full day ahead of schedule thanks to northwest winds up to 45 miles an hour.

Top speed for the first leg of the 30-day, California cruise was 11 knots during one hour of a 24-hour period that saw her cover 212.5 miles.

Skillings:

Get the Men Back To Yards

Skillings

A "very serious situation" exists in Victoria's strikebound shipyards, which are also faced with future loss of contracts for B.C. government ferries and federal government ships, Victoria MLA Waldo Skillings warned in the legislature last night.

He urged the government to "use the facilities of the labor minister and his deputy, and leave no stone unturned to get those men back to work, because we have few industries here."

FEELING OUT

"The government ferries have been the backbone of the business, and with them fizzling out and indications from the government at Ottawa that future contracts will be purely and simply on a competitive basis" the yards here appear headed for trouble.

"I can't understand what the union wants, and either the press is not giving the news to us or there is some kind of a nigger in the woodpile," said Mr. Skillings.

NEW BANK

The Sacred MLA said Victoria should really get the $2,500,000 matching grant from the federal government for the 1967 Confederation centenary "because Vancouver city is going to get the new bank."

Vancouver, as the province's financial centre, should have the new bank. But the government should ask the Capital Improvement District Commission to "come up with a project, perhaps an auditorium or a museum—but I'm not too sure it should be a museum," he said.

OTHER PLACES

"Other places in B.C. will be celebrating the centennial too," shouted someone from the NDP side of the house.

Mr. Skillings told the legislature that while "war" comes to me there is a great waiting list of people who can't get into hospitals in Victoria, "in the (Royal) Jubilee Hospital there is a 31-bed wing that has not been activated."

TRY BEST

He asked the minister of health services and hospital insurance to "try his very best to get that money allocated so the 31-bed wing can be added to the hospital."

The proposed provincial museum should be built on the land which was acquired for that purpose, on the east side of Government Street between Belleville and Elliot. "I think it is a mistake to have our buildings spread out too far."

On the Sunday liquor outlet issue: "I say, no change of liquor laws so far as Sundays are concerned."

Stickers To Note Donors

Red and gold stickers being distributed in Victoria and throughout B.C. by the Red Cross may save lives by identification of motorists. Blood types.

The stickers will be given to motorists who give blood to the Red Cross.

In case of accident the sticker indicates the driver carries a blood donor card. The card gives the driver's blood group. Thirty thousand of these windshield blood donor stickers will be available for distribution at all Red Cross blood donor clinics.

Blood supplies were ready at the hospital for accident victims whose blood type had been phoned ahead by police or ambulance attendants.

Garden Notes

Superlative Puzzle

By M. V. CHENNET, FENS

I had a most amusing but somewhat pathetic letter from one of my readers the other day who had gotten herself completely bogged down in trying to make up her vegetable seed order.

The catalogue she was using listed 23 different kinds of corn, 11 varieties of garden peas, 18 tomatoes and 12 carrots—and even the humble radish offered 20 choices. Each of these, according to the catalogue description, was the biggest, the earliest, the most vigorous, the sweetest, the most disease-resistant or the best-flavored.

After ticking a tomato variety that seemed to be about right for her garden, my confused friend turned the catalogue page only to be confronted with another variety which was also, according to the seedman, the world's best tomato. At this point she gave up and tossed the book to me. "Please tell me while I still have my sanity," she asked, "which of these varieties is really the best?"

I always become a little embarrassed when letters of this sort come in, for with my limited facilities for testing new varieties, I feel it would be brash and presumptuous of me to name any one variety as "best."

I am not an experimental station, and our garden, while perhaps a little more spacious than the average city plot, is certainly not big enough to test every new variety of vegetable, fruit and flower that comes along. And even if I could cover the whole field, I doubt very much whether my choice would necessarily agree with the opinion of other gardeners.

For instance, your choice in a potato variety might be a waxy, firm one, while my taste runs to the mealy, floury kind. A good onion, to you, could possibly be one so packed with flavor and so pungent that you have to wear a gas mask while peeling the thing. I like mine so sweet and mild they can be eaten raw between slices of rye bread. I select my carrot varieties for pulling young, while not much bigger than your middle finger; your specifications for a good carrot might be for a good keeper—one which can be stored all winter without going mouldy.

I should point out, too, that in choosing vegetable varieties, our sole criterion is flavor. Earliness is not particularly important in our family. We can wait, and I couldn't care less if our marrows are not the biggest in the world. I am not a market gardener depending upon prolific cropping for profits, so I am totally uninterested in the value or weight of the crop. When a new vegetable variety is up before the Chenhut jury, judgment is pronounced at the dinner table, and the only evidence admitted is—how does it taste?

I'd like to provide some guidance to those gardening newcomers who are picking their confused way through the pages of the seed catalogues, but with these limitations, the best I can do is to list and describe a few kinds which have grown well in our not-too-good soil, and which have won a nod of approval from the martinet of the Chenhut kitchen.

As I say, there may be and probably are better varieties which I haven't gotten around to trying yet, but if you'll accept my recommendations as purely personal opinions, I'll get started tomorrow on a list of vegetables which have taken kindly to my soil and aspect.

As in previous years, the Victoria Horticultural Society has arranged for three demonstrations of fruit tree pruning, all to be conducted by Alan Littler, district horticulturist.

The first demonstration is scheduled for 2 p.m. today at the residence of Miss M. P. Hendrie, 3328 Kingsley Street. The second demonstration will be held at 2 p.m. on Saturday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Colin Spence, 4238 Williamson Road.

Next week, on Wednesday at 2 p.m., Mr. Littler will demonstrate at the residence of Mrs. J. D. McGillivray, 1346 Thurlow Street.

The demonstrations will go ahead regardless of the weather, and the general public is invited to attend. Coffee and tea will be served by the social committee of the Victoria Horticultural Society.

JOHN CROSBY Assembles Princely Quotes

Philip Says What We Think

LONDON—I had a funny idea about royalty when I moved here. I thought the Royal Family was supposed to open trade fairs, sit in the royal box, and shut up. Especially that last.

"Duke Hits Out on Air Safety," runs the headline. "The Duke of Edinburgh yesterday told a meeting of air experts that British safety standards are lower than those of several other countries."

Or—this to the Coal Board—"How much longer can we go on exploiting every feature of this country purely for gain?" Or to the Electricity Board, when it claimed that it wasn't damaging the countryside as much as it had been in the 18th century: "Previous mistakes are not an excuse for making them again."

This is the kind of shutting-up I like. Years ago, in my days as a reporter of unimportant news functions, I became a master, first-class, of official oratory.

"I have been very much struck by the tremendous perseverance shown by everybody taking part in this scheme." That's official oratory. Also, it's Prince Philip. But not typical Philip.

Says Philip of himself: "In the normal way, I am not noticeably reticent about talking about things about which I know nothing." This is very candid self-disparagement and it isn't true.

Philip never knows nothing. He always knows something, sometimes a very great deal, especially on scientific subjects, but what he adds is personal, honest, and, above all, fearless opinion.

He is the true intelligent amateur who has almost disappeared. We cover in fear of the experts who are doing so much to take the quality out of modern life and Philip dares speak out what the rest of us think but don't dare say aloud or say only in our cups.

Philip is the only one I know to speak out publicly against the appalling vulgarity of contemporary art, which has upset the art establishment no end.

I don't always agree with him. He belted Edinburgh's architecture, which I consider among the world's best, but I defend to the death his right not only to harbor an opinion but to express it.

Philip says that criticism "is a very important function in a free country" and no one engages in it more than he does, including those of my own profession. His tirade against the Daily Express—"a bloody awful newspaper," "a newspaper full of lies"—well, most Britons have said those things under their breaths for years. Philip blurts it out.

But he's not just a blunter. He has a great gift for phrase and for sense and for humanity. "Getting angry about history is a sterile occupation." "Princely gifts don't come from princes any more. They come from tycoons." "Anyone can start an argument at any time just by mentioning British railways or British roads."

He is deeply humanist and his fears about humanity in a technological world are terribly sound. "Airline operation is a hideously complicated business. The passenger is subject to ruthless statistical surgery."

Or: "Progress is undiscriminating. Progress gives us better medical science, but it also gives us better bombs. How do you relate computers with compassion?"

It takes guts even to use that old-fashioned word, "compassion," in this shiny modern age. But he's got lots of guts.

The Colonel Blimps and the Mrs. Grundies were outraged when Philip told British industrialists, "Gentlemen, I think it is about time we pulled our fingers out." Crude, they said. Still, no one else has more bluntly summed up the issue—the modernization of Great Britain—over which the next general election will be fought.

He's fearfully anti-snobbery and, what's more important, he knows what modern snobbery is as well as the old-fashioned kind.

Oh schools, for instance. "Up to quite recently, it was thought one gets into a university by paying, but now there is another privilege—the intellectual privilege, which is another mistake. Privilege is privilege, whether it is due to money or intellect or whether you have six toes." I like that.

I think he's a great national asset, a sort of Supreme Court of Common Sense, somebody above the battle who can say what we all secretly think.

Someone to tell the universities—as Philip did—"University is merely so much vocational training unless it puts some fire in your belly." Or to a group of industrial managers: "There are too many one-ulcer men holding two-ulcer jobs."

Or: "Any country gets the young people it deserves." Or—bless him—"I am all for people travelling at other people's expense."

Or: "Science has been glamorized so long people think it can do no wrong." But he thinks it can. What's more, he says so.

The World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Babs Can't Lose

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—The girl who plays Marilyn Monroe, young Barbara "Babs" Loden, in Arthur Miller's play, After The Fall, will play the role in the movie version. It's in her contract. And who will make the film? Well, Jack Warner has been in New York to see the controversial cutting-up of Miss Monroe among Miller's other wives, and I'll take bets he gets the play.

Omar Sharif and Annette Bening had a noisy row and she is now smiling somewhere with Warren Beatty. No wonder Shirley MacLaine's kid brother makes so few movies. He's so busy with the girls.

I wonder why Elke Sommer in London went to such vehemence to assure me that there is no close friendship with her agent, and never has been. People who don't care don't fight. Elke and Karl Frings had quite a battle recently when he accused her of flirting with a reporter. Well, if you have to flirt, it might just as well be a reporter who is writing a piece about you or your agent who "sells" you.

Jane Fonda, pretty, a good actress and educated—at Vassar, I believe—will play the chief Vassar graduate in The Group for Charlie Feldman. But where is he going to get the other educated actresses?

Dined with Linda Cristal and her millionaire ex-actor husband Yale Wexler, at the Wilshire House Hotel, which Yale built for the trifling sum of $5,000,000. That's better than acting any day, says Linda. She gave up her movie career when they married three years ago. They have two babies: A two-year-old and one of two months. Yale appeared on Broadway in Tea and Sympathy with Joan Fontaine who is now busily honeymooning with my old friend Alfred Wright. I wish I had space to go into all the gadgets in Yale's hotel. I'll mention one. You press a button and your mattress can be hard, soft or medium.

Who will dare vote against Max von Sydow for the Oscar next year? He portrays Christ in the George C. Scott $20,000,000 production, The Greatest Story Ever Told. The picture should be ready for Christmas this year and Max, as Christ, will be eligible for the best actor award.

Joan Crawford was lampooned on the Bernard Braden show in London. Joan recently came out with a blast against Liz and Dick and the damage she believes they have done to Hollywood. On the Braden show, they used photographs of Joan's four husbands, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Franchot Tone, Philip Terry and the late Alfred Steele, with appropriate ribbing.

Bryan Forbes paused in New York with the print of his film Stanley Kubrick On A Wet Afternoon. He was on the Queen Elizabeth when it bumped into port without benefit of tugs, last week. "We didn't feel it," Brian assured me. In addition to directing Leslie Caron in The L-Shaped Room, Bryan, who is quite young to be so clever, also wrote the film script. And we should remember this at Oscar-voting time. His King Rat movie for Columbia will be filmed in Hollywood and Catalina.

"Well... what do you want?"

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday was one of those impossible days. Dad was sick in bed with the flu. Any woman will tell you it's easier to have four sick kids than one sick husband. He almost drove me crazy with his complaints and small demands.

Our oldest boy had to be driven to his music lesson. His sister was late for choir practice. The second boy had a dental appointment and was making excuses to stay home. The youngest son decided to spend the day picking on his 3-year-old sister.

I had run out of milk and oranges and couldn't possibly get to the market before it closed. The basket of unwashed laundry seemed to be leering at me from the corner. There it was, 11 p.m. and I was polishing shoes for Sunday.

As I polished I felt sorry for myself. After I had put everything away and prepared to switch out the lights my eyes fell on the row of polished shoes—five pairs of them. Then the thought struck me. What if I lost just one of these dear people who fill those shoes?

That's the thought I plan to hold from now on. I am sure straightened me out in a hurry. Pass it along, will you? — COUNTING MY BLESSINGS.

Dear Counting: Your wonderful letter helped put things in proper perspective for those who think it's the end of the world when the washing machine breaks down or Junior needs glasses. Thank you for writing.

sort of thing called by many names—but never philanthropy. If he wanted to help the girl he could have paid for her room at the YWCA. Tell him to run that campaign down the flagpole. Nobody in his right mind would salute it.

Dear Ann Landers: I've always said anyone who had to write to you must be nuts. Well, add me to the list of nuts because now I need help.

Three months ago I started to date an executive with an advertising agency. He was evasive about his home life but I didn't think much of it.

Friday he phoned me at work to break a date because of a wrenching back so I decided to surprise him. I got his address from his boss and rang the doorbell of his apartment at 6:30 p.m. A frowny little redhead, about 22, opened the door. She was wearing an old bathrobe and a pair of men's slippers. I was so shocked and hurt I pretended I had the wrong apartment.

The next day when he phoned to say he was feeling better I decided to clear the air. I asked about the girl. He said she was the daughter of friends from Boise who had run out of money and needed a place to stay. He insists she is really a philanthropist and that I have an evil mind. What do you think? — LINDA.

Mrs. M. Campbell was elected president of the Victoria Council of Women during the first day's session of the 70th annual meeting held yesterday in the Music Room of the Public Library.

Six vice-presidents were named as follows, Mrs. R. B. Shaw, Mrs. Sommers Clarke, Mrs. E. A. Boward, Mrs. T. E. Lowe, Mrs. G. Anstey and Dr. Marion Sherman, Mrs. Carrie MacLean was elected treasurer.

Mr. W. T. Lawson, group home supervisor of Family and Children Services on Cook Street, was guest speaker. In his talk on social problems of emotionally disturbed children, the speaker pointed out he was not referring to mentally retarded children.

He said emotionally disturbed children may be of average or even above average intelligence but they all had one thing in common their behavior was unacceptable to the community.

He grouped these children into three categories as follows: children with brain damage; psychotic children and children with behavior disorders.

Mr. Lawson said that children with behavior disorders are desperately unhappy children and are mostly from homes which are unable to meet their needs. They become bullies, they lie, steal, are often destructive, greedy and self-centred. They distrust adults yet need to be loved.

In answer to his question, "What happens to these children?" Mr. Lawson pointed out that in Victoria many are expelled from school, while many are drop-outs, and a number are appearing in family court.

He stressed the inadequacy of the proper facilities in Victoria and the province for helping these emotionally disturbed children. He said a long-term treatment centre designed especially for children is desperately needed.

"Even a day-care centre would be helpful," he said. The guest speaker was introduced by Dr. Sherman and thanked by Mrs. H. I. McKenzie, president.

New Fruit Produces A New Taste Thrill

By MURIEL WILSON

PALM SPRINGS, California — The orange was grown in Burma 4,000 years ago, and was eventually carried around the world by early explorers. Columbus on his second voyage brought the first oranges and lemons to the new world. Later, much later, they came to the west coast. The "parent" navel orange tree still stands in Riverside, California, and all navel oranges come from grafts of this tree and its descendants.

Much research has gone into the development of all citrus fruit, and during my trip to California and Arizona I became acquainted with a new fruit and a new taste thrill. Tangerines have long been grown in these areas, but in the last few years several new varieties have been produced, including the Minneola Tangelo. This jumbo size tangerine, has the easy-to-peel characteristic of the older varieties but is much larger, firmer, and brilliantly red-orange in color. A slight bump at one end makes it easily distinguishable. The pulp is deep orange, very juicy and with a tart-sweet flavor.

This fruit is so new that it has not yet appeared in British Columbia, but should find favor for it comes to the market through February and March after our Mandarin oranges are finished.

One of the highlights of our trip was lunch at the famous Chintre Ranch, home of the Douglas Grahams on the edge of the Salton Sea. Here we were guests at a western pit barbecue lunch, preceded by an unusual drink of old Mexico — the Marguerita served in frosted salt-rimmed glasses. The recipe... 1/2 tequila, 1/2 cointreau and 1/2 lime juice.

Try it on a hot day. It is refreshing as it is unusual.

Mexican barbecued pork was served together with a citrus salad, beans done in a way new to me, sweet-sour red cabbage and two varieties of chili. I did not try the hot one as the other scorched my throat all the way down. Dessert was fruit salad with a delicious sauce. The sun was warm and the fresh breeze from the sea gave a just-right tang.

Besides oranges and tangerines the Coachella Valley produces grapefruit, seedless grapes, limes, sweet corn, beans, asparagus, spinach and squash. Perhaps the most famous is the annual date crop, exceeding 26,000,000 pounds of the world's finest dates. We met Don Mitchell, a tremendously interesting man who is called the father of the date industry in the valley. Mr. Mitchell is going to send me some of his outstanding date recipes which I will share with you.

The owner of Firecliff Hotel where we spent the first night is Hilma Lawrence, a woman with a flair for distinctive and imaginative food. Talking with her, one knew she had a "feeling" for food that must look beautiful as well as taste good. She was kind enough to have the recipes for some of her specialties typed for us.

Dinner at the beautiful Tennis Club at Palm Springs was a festive and unforgettable occasion. The evening also yielded the recipe for the dinner entree, a specialty of the house—Escalope of Veal Cordeon Blue with Virginia Ham and Swiss Cheese.

Next morning we flew from Palm Springs to Phoenix, Arizona, and thence by bus to Scottsdale. This town could have been lifted right out of the past with its frontier store fronts, hitching posts and gas street lamps. Behind these fronts there are shops like Trader Vics, Saks, and Maginit's. Side by side with these famous names you will find The Last Chance Saloon and The Lulu Belle Gay Nineties Cafe and Bar. (Here we ate one of the finest meals of the whole trip.) In Scottsdale is the large plushy Valley Ho Hotel where we stayed.

Children Unharmed
In Bus-Car Crash

Twenty-five school children escaped injury yesterday morning when their bus ran into a ditch after colliding with a car on the Patricia Bay Highway in Saanichton near the Ta-Ta-Yet Indian store.

The southbound bus collided with a southbound car driven by Mrs. Elsie Kwiram, 10470 Rest Haven, then both vehicles landed in the ditch. Both drivers suffered only bruises. Damage was about $1,000.

Editor Says:

West Berlin
Island
Of Freedom

West Berlin was described, as an island of freedom and wealth in the East German sea of drabness and poverty when Richard Bower, Colonist editor-in-chief, spoke to the St. Luke's Brotherhood of Anglican Churchmen, in the church hall last night.

Mr. Bower was speaking of the trip he made to West Germany last year as a guest of that republic.

He said that West Berlin is perhaps the greatest showcase of democracy on the face of the earth today.

Hope for Miracle

There is a sort of "dream-like quality" about West Berlin. The people persist in holding the firm belief that some day by some political miracle Berlin will become whole.

This reflects the feeling of West Germany, Mr. Bower said.

Some West German politicians, although outwardly supporting the view that rapprochement can be brought about between the two Germanys, have accepted the more realistic view that east and west are inexorably divided and probably will remain so, perhaps forever.

Lessening Tension

The socialist party there is selling the idea that there will be a lessening of tension between east and west and possible reunion if Social Democratic Party wins the 1965 election over the Christian Democratic Union, the present government, he said.

Another school of thought, which has made some inroads into the CDU, discards this idea and bases its hopes on the premise that the Kremlin is gradually relaxing its hold as it has done in other countries.

Closer Relationship

This, it is felt, would allow East Germany a modicum of self government which could lead to a closer relationship if not an outright union of German peoples.

"There is something to be said for this proposition," said Mr. Bower. He explained that the Communist government at Christmas relaxed the rules governing crossing into East Berlin. "This could indicate a softening of approach."

Even if this takes place there is a feeling among political thinkers that there's no guarantee a majority of East Germans would join the West.

Always Dictators

Political students point out that few East Germans have lived under anything except some form of dictatorship. Under the Kaiser they had a brief experience with the Weimar republic, then the Nazis, Mr. Bower said.

Mr. Bower felt it true to say that people who have been escaping from East Germany made the effort, not out of deep political feeling or the desire to live in a democracy but because life is easier, materially better, in the West.

Great Contrast

Comparing the two Berlins, Mr. Bower said that the West-ern side is prosperous, goes ahead, with fine buildings, whereas East Berlin is a different world with few cars, general austerity and equal conditions.

Climbers Survive Icy Nights in Igloos

Walk
Out
Safely

VANCOUVER (CP)—Seven mountaineers who built igloos to survive three nights on a freezing mountainside walked out safely Tuesday.

Bad weather and poor visibility held the party on a ridge between the twin peaks of the Lions, famous landmark north of here.

Two senior climbers said their junior companions behaved magnificently under difficult conditions.

The group included Jim Sinclair, 30, Tony Cousina, 28, Wade Cherenenoff, 21, Duncan White, 17, Randy Hay, 15, Bob Laird, 17, and Drew Tait, 17.

The climbers made their way Saturday up an ice tunnel to just a few hundred feet from the twin Lions peaks. But at dusk they ran into a white-out—mist merging with snow to cut off visibility.

They built their igloos in traditional Eskimo fashion to fight off cold and wind.

Sunday was no better and their primitive stoves ran out of fuel. They ate cold food and their clothing and bedding was soaked.

Monday they decided they must risk crossing 4,000 feet of treacherous avalanche slopes to reach a spot for a safe descent. They could not trace the same route back because of new snow.

Said Sinclair, the leader: "I told them that once you start a thing like this you go like the devil. They were game. They did fine."

Dusk forced a halt while they still were on the slope, and they decided to halt again. They built a giant igloo and exchanged shouts across more than a mile of mountain valley to a rescue party.

At dawn, 11 experienced rescue men were ready to go up.

But at noon the missing party emerged.

Khrushchev
Pet Plan
Downgraded

MOSCOW (AP)—Communist party committee men heartily endorsed the pet virgin lands grain-growing project downgraded Tuesday. Coupled with that was a forecast that the Ukraine, the old bread basket of the Soviet Union, will soon double production.

The virgin lands project was quietly eased out of the Soviet farm limelight by Bernard Dvoretzky deputy premier of the Kazakhstan Republic, at a Kremlin meeting on plans for pulling the country out of its chronic agricultural crisis.

The Ukraine's prospects were played up by Mark Spivak, agricultural minister of that fertile province. Dvoretzky, while skipping over last year's reported disastrous wheat harvest, admitted his government "is not yet fully utilizing all the possibilities of the virgin lands territories."

He said "Kazakhstan can produce 1,000,000,000 pounds (16,000,000 metric tons) of grain a year or more" and is expected to double that by 1970.

A far-reaching plan to divert part of the headwaters of Bowker Creek and send it in a northerly direction was passed by Saanich public works committee last night.

The two-year plan, if approved by council, would involve spending of $40,000 in the first year around the Shelbourne-Blair area. Aim of the plan is to head off possible major increases in the flow of the creek as the area develops.

Reds Should Join

Help Poor Home Plea

TORONTO (CP)—British Prime Minister Douglas-Home called on the developed countries including Russia Tuesday night to get together to improve the lot of the poorer nations in the cause of peace.

There is no reason why Russia should not recognize a common duty to work to save the human race from extinction, he said in an address to Toronto's Empire Club at its 60th anniversary dinner. (See also Page 3.)

ONLY WAY

"The surest way—the only way—to serve humanity is to join the ideological conflict and organize the world for peace and plenty," he said.

"If the Soviet Union is willing to settle the differences in Europe and to turn to these more fruitful fields of enterprise, the smaller squabbles would be contained because the poor and discontented would see the prize before them of the fullness of life."

FLIES TO WASHINGTON

Sir Alec spoke here after a two-day visit to Ottawa during which he conferred with Prime Minister Pearson. He flies to Washington today for talks with President Johnson.

Sir Alec addressed his plea for co-operation particularly to the industrialized nations of the northern hemisphere, who could lead in solving the "problem of problems" of the disparity of wealth between the nations.

OWN ECONOMIES

Aid to the developing nations was important, but trade and investment were more so. The most important contribution for the developed countries would be to expand their own economies so as to provide increasing outlets for other countries' products.

International trade must be liberalized. "In this way also we can provide expanded export markets and facilitate the diversification of the economies of developing countries away from their present undue dependence on a limited range of primary products."

Second Welfare Worker Quits

'SERVICE A FARCE'

Black Lashes Critics

'IT'S LOW POLITICS'

By TERRY HAMMOND
Colonist Legislative
Reporter

A B.C. social worker has quit his job charging government neglect of a northern B.C. area "where prostitution, drunkenness and promiscuity has driven juvenile delinquency to the danger point."

W. G. du Temple, a 23-year-old university graduate who works for the welfare department at Fort St. John, fired off his letter of resignation to Premier Bennett charging:

● A case load almost double that considered desirable by the department.

● Responsibility for the needs of a population of 5,100 people scattered through five communities and along more than 1,100 miles of road.

● Because of the impossible demands upon him the service he could render was a mere "farce."

● The welfare department's "in-training" course for social workers is useless.

● One of his communities had seven juveniles on probation but no probation officer.

● Without proper training he was forced to perform services beyond his knowledge or experience.

His letter was the second to be addressed to the premier by a government social worker in little more than a month.

The first was from Mrs. Bridget Moran of Prince George. She didn't quit, but she wrote to protest that the department was dangerously understaffed and its affairs not properly administered.

News of the Fort St. John social worker's letter reached Victoria just before Welfare Minister Black got up to launch his first defence of his department since the session opened just under three weeks ago.

NO REFERENCE

He made no reference to it other than to say he had an answer.

Mr. du Temple said he graduated in Arts from UBC last April and joined the welfare department to gain experience in the field before returning to university for a degree in social work.

He had expected to work in a junior capacity, but after a "perfectly useless" in-training course found himself saddled with the duties of a trained social worker.

On the day he reported for work at Fort St. John he had to counsel a severely disturbed

Mr. Mair said he didn't know the case the worker referred to but it would be defeating the purpose of the service if children who could not be helped were admitted. He said there are a great many waiting and his department only select those it can help.

For Northern Industry

B.C. Plugs into Alcan

B.C. Hydro is on the point of signing a long-term contract to buy up $14,000,000 worth of power from Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd.

Announcement that negotiations had been concluded or else were on the point of conclusion came outside the legislature last night from Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

He said primary purpose of the contract would be to enable Hydro to spur industrial development of north-central B.C. pending delivery of the first Peace River power.

The contract will allow B.C. to buy up to 70,000 kilowatts from Alcan at a price around five mills per kwh.

From 1965 onwards, Mr. Kiernan said, the contract could cost B.C. $2,000,000 a year.

The agreement would not terminate until sometime after 1970. The minister said Alcan will have surplus generating capacity at its Kemano plant until 1972.

DOUBLY BENEFICIAL

The contract would be doubly beneficial to the province, Mr. Kiernan told reporters, because it will allow industries basing their plans on Peace Power to get started within a year and it would allow Hydro to start building up a load for the Peace project which won't deliver its first power until 1968.

In later years, he continued, the heavier transmission lines which will have to be built to use the Alcan power could be used to wheel Peace River back to the aluminum smelter.

If production ever exceeds the company's Kemano power potential.

The Alcan power would be taken to Terrace along a 230-kv line from Kemano.

From Terrace, he said, it could go wherever it is needed in the Smithers, Burns Lake, Fort St. James area.

Flour Industry Aided by Reds

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's dwindling flour industry reflected a Russian shot in the arm in production figures for 1963 of 41,305,000 hundred-weight, 10 per cent higher than in 1962.

About 29,000,000 bushels of wheat in flour form was included in the record $500,000,000 wheat order placed by Russia last October.

Peace Force

Canada Awaits Formula

FROM AP, UPI

The confusion which seems to be the outstanding aspect of Canada's participation in an international peace-keeping force for the island of Cyprus was compounded yesterday with contradictory opinions from British and Canadian authorities.

British sources said last night in New York that Canada, The Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and Norway have agreed to join with the United States and Britain in setting up a peace-keeping force. France, they said, had refused to take part.

Ottawa, on the other hand, said the Canadian government is withholding a final decision on the peace force until an acceptable formula is worked out for sending an international force there.

Canada, the Ottawa report

consideration to the British request that this country contribute about 1,000 infantrymen to the contemplated force of about 10,000 men.

Meanwhile, in Cyprus, sharp new fighting broke out between Greek and Turkish Cypriots at the key southern port of Limassol. The British commanding general ordered British families from the nearby base confined to their homes.

Sinatra Agreed to Abduction, Says Defence

'Disc Star' Financed Kidnapping

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Defence attorneys charged Tuesday Frank Sinatra, Jr., agreed to his own kidnapping—a plot they said was financed by a mysterious man as an "advertising scheme" to win fame and money like his movie star father.

The "mystery man" was not named, but defence attorney George A. Ford said a "mysterious financier" was linked to the case. Ford made the charge in his opening statement to the jury of nine men three women at the trial of three men accused of kidnapping young Sinatra Dec. 8 and releasing him unharmed a few days later for $240,000 ransom paid by his father.

The federal government called its first four witnesses Tuesday morning, mostly to supply background for charges relating to the kidnap conspiracy.

"We intend to show that certain people financed the alleged kidnapping, which I would call an advertising venture," Ford declared at the second day of the trial. He said the "kidnapping" was masterminded and financed by an unnamed singer who has "cut 2,000,000 records."

Another defence attorney, Gladys Towles Root, said the defence would show that a singer named Dean Torrence, member of the singing team of Jan and Dean, shared a safety deposit box with one defendant, Barry Worthington Keenan, 23, and that $1,870 of the ransom money was found in the box by federal agents.

Mrs. Root also said in her opening statement that the defence would show that "a contractual agreement was reached between Frank Sinatra Jr. and others in the alleged kidnapping."

Ford is a co-defender for Joseph Clyde Amelar, 22, while

Mrs. Root represents defendant John William Irwin, 42.

Keenan's attorney, Charles Crouch, told the jury that the "kidnapping" was "a comedy of errors . . . like a movie script."

He said the crux of the case was for jurors "to decide whether a crime has been committed."

The prosecution charges that the entertainer's 19-year-old son was spirited away from a Lake Tahoe motel, smuggled through a mountain roadblock and then driven to the Los Angeles area where he was released at the time of the ransom payoff.

B.C. to Be Asked To Broaden Survey

Greater Victoria Inter-municipal committee will ask the provincial government to include unorganized territories of North Saanich, View Royal, Cowdwood, Langford and Metchoin in a proposed study of area sewer needs for the next 50 years.

Reeve R. Gordon Lee, chairman of Greater Victoria metro health board, told the committee Central Saanich wants to participate in the study and so does the village of Sidney.

COVER PENINSULA

This means that if the government agrees to bring in the unorganized territories in the immediate surrounding area the study will cover the entire Saanich Peninsula and the built-up sections to the west.

Reeve Lee said it remains "questionable" at this time whether the provincial government would agree to participate in the study to extent desired. He said it would be a "grave mistake," however, to overlook this opportunity of making a comprehensive survey of sewer needs.

LACK OF INTEREST

Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay said the lack of interest on the government's part is at the departmental level and suggested that representatives of the inter-municipal committee and the metro health board talk the matter over with Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black and Health Minister Eric Martin.

Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White, representing the technical committee which originally recommended the survey, said consulting engineers would design new sewer outfalls and lay out trunk sewers for the entire area.

The strike is continuing at B.C.'s three major shipyards with no end in sight and no meetings scheduled between labor and management or with provincial deputy labor minister William Sands.

Rejected by union members at a Monday meeting in Vancouver was Mr. Sands' proposal for a three-year contract.

Representatives of the three shipyards, who also attended the meeting, turned down the proposal last week.

FRINGE BENEFITS

The proposal called for a three-year contract with a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for journeymen each year and a further two cents an hour in fringe benefit increases, with the exception of boiler-makers and machinists who were offered five cents the first year, 10 cents the next two years and two cents in fringe benefit increases.

The proposal called for a number of other adjustments in contract provisions.

Approximately 1,400 workers at Victoria Machinery Depot and Yarrows Ltd. Victoria, and about 650 at Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd., North Vancouver, are still on strike.

Union members are picketing VMD on Bay Street and Dallas Road, Yarrows on Esquimalt Road and at their Nanaimo warehouse, and the Government Docking Dock in Esquimalt.

EXPECTED BACK

The Bahamas-based freighter Maratha Endeavour is expected back at the drydock towards the end of the month to reload her lumber cargo, discharged last month before repairs in Seattle.

Asked if longshoremen would load the Maratha Endeavour if the drydock is still being picketed, Stanley Ball, their president and business agent, said: "There will be no problem. We would work it out with the other unions. We feel that we would be able to load the ship."

Island Mayor

Keep Weed From Kids

PORT ALBERNI—Mayor Les Hammer proposes to try to save young people from the nicotine habit.

At council meeting he suggested that legislation should be considered to prevent boys and girls in their early teens from buying cigarettes.

Mayor Hammer said he realized an act of the legislature would be required to permit the council to pass a bylaw prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to youngsters.

"I realize, too, that making the sale illegal will not prevent the youngsters from smoking, but I think we should put as many stumbling blocks in their way as we can. As it is we are making it too easy for young people to get cigarettes," the mayor said.

Strong support for his suggestion came from Ald. Garnet Reynolds, who said smoking is detrimental to health. He said he is aware that there are confirmed smokers in Grade 7.

After clerk-controller H. D. Thain told council it had no power to pass a bylaw making it illegal to sell cigarettes to youngsters unless the provincial government gives it authority, Mayor Hammer quipped, "We have the Noxious Weed Act."

A Victoria lawyer said, however, the matter is already covered by the Tobacco Restraint Act.

This act makes it an offence for anyone to sell cigarettes to anyone under 16 and for anyone under 16 to have cigarettes or to smoke.

The act also says it is the duty of police to seize cigarettes in the possession of anyone under 16.

Penalty for the first offence in supplying cigarettes to someone under 16—whether for his own use or not—is a fine not exceeding $10. For the second offence the maximum fine is $25 and for third and subsequent offences not more than $100.

For a person under 16 found smoking or having cigarettes, the penalty for the first offence is a reprimand, for the second a $1 fine and the third not more than a $4 fine.

Elderly Couple Hurt in Crash

NANAIMO—Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Dunn, 110 Stewart Avenue, were injured late Monday when they collided with a car while crossing the street near their home.

The elderly couple had just left a bus at the time of the accident. Driver of the car was identified as Gordon Davies, Chase River.

At Nanaimo Regional Hospital Mr. Dunn is in good condition with head injuries. Mrs. Dunn in fair condition with undisclosed but more severe injuries.

Sort Out Problems

Too Many Traffic Cases In Family Court—Cox

Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay said the caseload of Greater Victoria family and juvenile court would be greatly reduced by removal of traffic cases from its jurisdiction.

Mr. Cox said there is "good reason" to continue operating a joint family and juvenile court, but added: "I'm unalterably opposed to either building a new court or acquiring property until some serious problems are sorted out."

The reeve said the idea of removing all traffic cases from juvenile court was not a new one.

If it was put into practice here, Mr. Cox said, it would probably require a deputy magistrate to sit in a night traffic court for Greater Victoria. But he indicated this was preferable to the present system.

Removal of traffic cases from juvenile court and other problems will be discussed with the attorney-general's department.

DUNCAN—Voters here gave solid backing yesterday to a $150,000 plebiscite for a new city centre, near the proposed new federal courthouse.

Of 1,451 eligible voters, 512 turned out to vote 371 to 137 in favor of the plebiscite. The 35.2-per-cent turnout was about the number expected.

Mayor Jack Dobson was pleased.

NOT SURPRISED

"I'm not surprised," he said, "and I'm very grateful. We will wait to sell debentures until the mortgage picture is good enough, and will invest the money until it is required."

The money will not be borrowed all at once, he added, but in stages.

$150,000 OUTLAY

Outlay of the $150,000 is expected to run as follows:

For land—three or four acres near the newly-planned $700,000 government courthouse—$112,000.

To carry out necessary improvements and demolish existing buildings, $35,000.

For the bylaw and contingencies, about $3,000.

Liquor Stolen

TOFINO—Twelve bottles of liquor and $37 in change were stolen by thieves who broke into the Royal Canadian Legion branch here during the weekend. The club-room door was forced, but the safe was untouched. RCMP are investigating.

Alberni

School Costs Higher

PORT ALBERNI—Board of Alberni School District has estimated an expenditure of $2,363,730 for the year, an increase of approximately $325,000 over last year's budget.

Councils of the Twin Cities are planning a meeting with the board to discuss various items in the estimates.

Major item is teachers' salaries which total $1,385,430, including pay for 19 additional teachers.

LAST YEAR

Actual expenditure in the district last year was $2,560,118, with additional income resulting from a new federal provincial agreement in regards schooling for Indian children and the fact that the Sarita school area was added to District 70.

The board has included $47,800 in the estimates to cover half of the board's share of the cost of establishing a vocational wing at Alberni District Secondary School. It is planned to have the wing in operation by September 1965 and, if the expenditure is not required during the current year, the amount will be carried forward as a surplus when the 1966 budget is prepared.

PREPARE PLANS

Representatives of the architectural firm, McCarter and Nairne, are presently in the district to prepare plans for four projects under the school building bylaw passed by owner-electors last December. Other projects will be planned by Cariberg and Jackson, with the preliminary work expected to start next week.

Mrs. Al Addison

Council of Women Elects President

NANAIMO—Mrs. Al Addison was elected president of the Nanaimo Council of Women at a recent meeting, succeeding Mrs. N. T. Bennett.

Resolutions approved by the council urged training in proper use of firearms to cut hunting accidents; safe crosswalks near schools; standardized school curricula across Canada; provision by the government of suitable specific treatment for sexual psychopaths, and removal of all food taxes.

OTHER OFFICERS

Other officers are Mrs. A. St. Jean, first vice-president; Miss Lee Johnson, second vice-president; Miss Kay Powell, recording secretary; Mrs. J. C. Healy, treasurer, and Mrs. F. Armstrong, archivist.

Members were told by Mrs. Douglas White that present fire department leaders were not long enough to reach the upper floors of new high-rise apartments being planned and built in Nanaimo.

CHIEF LAW

... 24 years

Saanich Fire Chief to Retire

By BOB FETHICK

Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Law, 60, will retire in June after 24 years service with the department.

In the search to replace the veteran fire fighter Saanich council has placed advertisements in papers as far east as Winnipeg. But chairman of the Saanich finance committee Joseph Casey said last night it was also possible the position could be filled from within the department.

The position is advertised in all the fire halls," he said.

Chief Law first joined the Saanich fire department in 1940 as chief after serving 14 years on the city fire department.

In those days, he says, the department had two pieces of equipment, a converted Cadillac and a GMC truck and six men.

Since the chief took over and with the co-operation of council the department has grown to five modern fire trucks, three fire halls—at Elk Lake, Shelbourne, and a new headquarters at Vernon Avenue, and an emergency ambulance service with a modern ambulance capable of carrying four stretcher cases.

There are 44 members now on staff.

"Improved water services with lots more hydrants have made the job of fire fighting easier in the area," said Chief Law. He also pointed out at one time the department was responsible for fighting fire on 52 square miles in Saanich. Since the formation of Central Saanich municipality the area has been cut to 39, still a tidy chunk of real estate to be looked after.

The chief believes existing equipment will be adequate to look after needs of the municipality for some years.

"But if building continues as it has been going in the municipality we will need to take on more men," says the chief.

His pride and joy is the gleaming array of modern recording equipment in the alarm room at Saanich headquarters.

"This is the most modern equipment in Canada, only duplicated in Winnipeg as far as I know. With this there is no dispute with the public. Every word spoken is put on tape and the tapes are kept for 12 months," says the chief.

The chief is looking forward to his retirement, though, and after two six-month extensions on his service is planning a long trip through the United States and some cruising.

"Our two children are grown up and married and we can leave anytime we choose," he says.

Indian Centre

'Coddling' Critics Answered

PORT ALBERNI—Critics of his proposed Friendship Centre for Indians were answered by Mayor Les Hammer at this week's council meeting.

"I don't see where it is coddling them to give them a place to go for advice and recreation," he declared. "I am concerned particularly about the young people who come from isolated areas."

CONTEVERSY

Mayor Hammer said he had found himself in the midst of controversy following his suggestion last month.

While most of the comments he had received were in favor of the plan, some had criticized it as "coddling" the native Indians rather than giving them responsibility.

He told of seeing youngsters wandering around the city at night. "I found a young boy asleep in a phone booth," he said. "He wasn't drunk. It was just that he had nowhere to go."

OFFERED SUPPORT

The mayor quoted from a letter from T. S. Barnett, M.P., who offered his support and advised that Jean H. Legasse, acting director of the citizenship branch, department of citizenship and immigration, would be visiting B.C. in the near future. He expressed the hope that Mayor Hammer or a council representative would be able to meet Mr. Legasse at the Vancouver Friendship Centre on Feb. 17.

Ald. Garnet Reynolds told of a centre in Chilliwack, sponsored by the Baptist church of the area. He told of the value of the centre where as many as 40 people would gather at a time for companionship and recreation.

"I think we have a problem here and there should be something done about it. I think there should be a place for the young people to go to get them off the street. If this is coddling them then we should close the Seamen's Haven, Teen Town and Salvation Army Hostels," said the mayor.

He told of meeting prominent Indians of this district and of their intention to get in touch with heads of reserve councils in up-coast areas.

Reds Should Join

Help Poor Home Plea

TORONTO (CP)—British Prime Minister Douglas-Home called on the developed countries including Russia Tuesday night to get together to improve the lot of the poorer nations in the cause of peace.

There is no reason why Russia should not recognize a common duty to work to save the human race from extinction, he said in an address to Toronto's Empire Club at its 60th anniversary dinner. (See also Page 3.)

ONLY WAY

"The surest way—the only way—to serve humanity is to jettison the ideological conflict and organize the world for peace and plenty," he said.

"If the Soviet Union is willing to settle the differences in Europe and to turn to these more fruitful fields of enterprise, the smaller squabbles would be contained because the poor and discontented would see the prize before them of the fullness of life."

FLIES TO WASHINGTON

Sir Alec spoke here after a two-day visit to Ottawa during which he conferred with Prime Minister Pearson. He flies to Washington today for talks with President Johnson.

Sir Alec addressed his plea for co-operation particularly to the industrialized nations of the northern hemisphere, who could lead in solving the "problem of problems" of the disparity of wealth between the nations.

OWN ECONOMIES

Aid to the developing nations was important, but trade and investment were more so. The most important contribution for the developed countries would be to expand their own economies so as to provide increasing outlets for other countries' products.

International trade must be liberalized. "In this way also we can provide expanded export markets and facilitate the diversification of the economies of developing countries away from their present undue dependence on a limited range of primary products."

Liechtenstein Does Its Bit

VADUZ, Liechtenstein, (Reuters)—Liechtenstein, which has a population of 16,000, will form a peace corps to help underdeveloped countries, the parliament decided Tuesday.

The Western European principality covers only 62 square miles but its postage stamps, its false teeth factories and tax laws make it the world's most highly industrialized state.

WELFARE JOB SAID 'FARCE'

By TERRY HAMMOND
Colonist Legislative
Reporter

A B.C. social worker has quit his job charging government neglect of a northern B.C. area "where prostitution, drunkenness and promiscuity has driven juvenile delinquency to the danger point."

W. G. du Temple, a 23-year-old university graduate who works for the welfare department at Fort St. John, fired off his letter of resignation to Premier Bennett charging:

● A caseload almost double that considered desirable by the department.

● Responsibility for the needs of a population of 5,100 people scattered through five communities and along more 1,100 miles of road.

● Because of the impossible demands upon him the service he could render was a mere "farce."

● The welfare department's "in-training" course for social workers is useless.

● One of his communities had seven juveniles on probation but no probation officer.

● Without proper training he was forced to perform services beyond his knowledge or experience.

His letter was the second to be addressed to the premier by a government social worker in little more than a month.

The first was from Mrs. Bridget Moran of Prince George. She didn't quit, but she wrote to protest that the department was dangerously understaffed and its affairs not properly administered.

News of the Fort St. John social worker's letter reached Victoria just before Welfare Minister Black got up to launch his first defence of his department since the session opened just under three weeks ago.

NO REFERENCE

He made no reference to it other than to say he had an answer.

Mr. du Temple said he graduated in Arts from UBC last April and joined the welfare department to gain experience in the field before returning to university for a degree in social work.

He had expected to work in a junior capacity, but after a "perfectly useless" in-training course found himself saddled with the duties of a trained social worker.

On the day he reported for work at Fort St. John he had to counsel a severely disturbed

'Low Politics' Says Black

B.C.'s industrial boom is multiplying social welfare problems, Welfare Minister Black said yesterday.

Mr. Black said yesterday it had been difficult for him to remain silent while charges were hurled at his department.

But during this period he had seen "politics in its lowest form being played with this vital public service."

His critics, he charged, had dealt in isolated cases and in generalities.

But anyone who cited single cases "is obviously trying to beat some emotional drum."

To say his department was an exceedingly difficult one to administer was "the understatement of the year."

In fact he could only do it by dint of working "24 hours a day, 365 days a year," like any other minister. (Opposition speakers have charged him as a two-days-a-week welfare minister since he told a TV audience that his other portfolios take three days a week.)

ONE HOLIDAY

He had had only one holiday in the past 11 years, he told the House to laughter from government as well as opposition benches.

He seemed momentarily non-plussed when the premier muttered audibly "perpetual holiday," but Mr. Bennett was smiling when he said it.

'We Can't Help Every Child'

Sevenson residential treatment centre in Victoria won't take children it can't help, said treatment director James Mair.

Mr. Mair was commenting on a charge from a resigning Fort St. John social worker, W. G. du Temple, that an emotionally disturbed youngster had been denied admission to Sevenson and the Children's Foundation after workers had tried to get him in for seven years.

Mr. Mair said he didn't know the case the worker referred to but it would be defeating the purpose of the service if children who could not be helped were admitted. He said there are a great many waiting and his department only select those it can help.

Northern Industry

B.C. Plugs into Alcan For Surplus Power

B. C. Hydro is on the point of signing a long-term contract to buy up $14,000,000 worth of power from Aluminium Company of Canada Ltd.

Announcement that negotiations had been concluded or else were on the point of conclusion came outside the legislature last night from Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

He said primary purpose of the contract would be to enable Hydro to spur industrial development of north-central B.C. pending delivery of the first Peace River power.

The contract will allow B.C. to buy up to 70,000 kilowatts from Alcan at a price around five mills per kw.

From 1965 onwards, Mr. Kiernan said, the contract could cost B.C. $2,000,000 a year.

The agreement would not terminate until sometime after 1970. The minister said Alcan will have surplus generating capacity at its Kemano plant until 1972.

DOUBLY BENEFICIAL

The contract would be doubly beneficial to the province, Mr. Kiernan told reporters, because it will allow industries basing their plans on Peace Power to get started within a year and it would allow Hydro to start building up a load for the Peace project which won't deliver its first power until 1968.

In later years, he continued, the heavier transmission lines which will have to be built to use the Alcan power could be used to wheel Peace River back to the aluminum smelter if production ever exceeds the company's Kemano power potential.

The Alcan power would be taken to Terrace along a 230-kv line from Kemano.

From Terrace, he said, it could go wherever it is needed in the Smithers, Burns Lake, Fort St. James area.

Peace Force

Canada Awaits Formula

FROM AP, UPI

The confusion which seems to be the outstanding aspect of Canada's participation in an international peace-keeping force for the island of Cyprus was compounded yesterday with contradictory opinions from British and Canadian authorities.

British sources said last night in New York that Canada, The Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and Norway have agreed to join with the United States and Britain in setting up a peace-keeping force. France, they said, had refused to take part.

Ottawa, on the other hand, said the Canadian government is withholding a final decision on the peace force until an acceptable formula is worked out for sending an international force there.

Canada, the Ottawa report said, was giving sympathetic consideration to the British request that this country contribute about 1,000 infantrymen to the contemplated force of about 10,000 men.

Meanwhile, in Cyprus, sharp new fighting broke out between Greek and Turkish Cypriots at the key southern port of Limassol. The British commanding general ordered British families from the near-by base confined to their homes.

U.S. Tests Canada's New Drone

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian-built CL-50 Drone, or pilotless, reconnaissance aircraft, will be flown for the first time shortly at the U.S. Army proving ground in Yuma, Ariz.

The Canadian Army said Tuesday a prototype of the remote-controlled Drone is being prepared for flight tests at Yuma. The Drone would gather intelligence over enemy territory where manned flight would be hazardous or impossible.

Sinatra Agreed to Abduction, Says Defence

'Disc Star' Financed Kidnapping

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Defence attorneys charged Tuesday Frank Sinatra, Jr., agreed to his own kidnapping—a plot they said was financed by a mysterious man as an "advertising scheme" to win fame and money like his movie star father.

The "mystery man" was not named, but defence attorney George A. Forde said a "mysterious financier" was linked to the case. Forde made the charge in his opening statement to the jury of nine men, three women at the trial of three men accused of kidnapping young Sinatra Dec. 8 and releasing him unharmed a few days later for $240,000 ransom paid by his father.

The federal government called its first four witnesses Tuesday morning, mostly to supply background for charges relating to the kidnap conspiracy.

"We intend to show that certain people financed the alleged kidnapping, which I would call an advertising venture," Forde declared at the second day of the trial. He said the "kidnapping" was masterminded and financed by an unnamed singer who has "cut 2,000,000 records."

Another defence attorney, Gladys Towles Root, said the defence would show that a singer named Dean Torrence, member of the singing team of Jan and Dean, shared a safety deposit box with one defendant, Barry Worthington Keenan, 23, and that $1,570 of the ransom money was found in the box by federal agents.

Mrs. Root also said in her opening statement that the defence would show that "a contractual agreement was reached between Frank Sinatra, Jr. and others in the alleged kidnapping."

Forde is a co-defender for Joseph Clyde Amaler, 23, while Mrs. Root represents defendant John William Irwin, 42.

Keenan's attorney, Charles Crouch, told the jury that the "kidnapping" was "a comedy of errors . . . like a movie script."

He said the crux of the case was for jurors "to decide whether a crime has been committed."

"We will show that Frank Jr. was involved in chicanery from start to finish," Crouch said.

"If Frankie (Sinatra Jr.) consented by even inference or implication to his abduction, then no crime was committed . . . and we can show that on more than one occasion he consented."
